

The Glory Of Our God And King

Words and Music by David Lee Kennard, 1997

Glory to God in the highest, ascribe to Him honor and worth.
In the cleft of the rock He does hide us, bringing peace to His people on earth.

Though righteous Your law and its power to condemn,
and just is Your wrath upon all who offend,
You have pledged to our souls that Omnipotent Friend
in whom all who have trusted prevail.

That One in whom all who have trusted abide,
in obedience, won Thy great love.
And Your wrath which our sin demands to be applied
has been drowned in His sanctified blood.

O merciful Savior, how can it be true?
For me, before God, has stood One such as You,
to provide and redeem and restore and renew
and bring peace to my wandering soul.

Hear now, O my soul, He has spoken:
His Word is both steadfast and sure.
I, though weak, may be bent but not broken;
before Him, both blameless and pure.
Exalt Him in praises, our Thrice Holy King,
with angels in heaven let our voices ring:
and forever and ever and ever we'll sing
to the Glory of our God and King.

And forever and ever and ever we'll sing
to the Glory of our God and King!
